Interpolative Decomposition and Its Applications

Lexing Ying　(应乐兴)
Stanford University

Interpolative decomposition is a simple and yet powerful tool for approximating low-rank matrices. After discussing the theory and algorithm, we will present a few new applications of interpolative decomposition in numerical linear algebra, partial differential equations, and machine learning.